

Golden Organic Safflower, NutraSaff™

NutraSaff is an amazing new birdfeed. Scientists in the world's largest safflower breeding program at Montana State University have developed NutraSaff especially for bird feeding markets. Preliminary findings show birds prefer NutraSaff to traditional safflower 2:1.

What is so great about NutraSaff?

- Has no outer shell - only the exocarp (thin lining directly under shell)
- 15% higher seed oil content
- 25% higher protein
- 30% higher fat content (energy)
- Birds love golden safflower - squirrels do not
- Squirrels are not fond of it - virtually eliminate squirrel problems
- Red-winged blackbirds, common grackles, and starlings are not especially fond of NutraSaff. They may peck away at some, but will not monopolize the feeder as they do with other seeds.
- All NutraSaff products are non-GMO (non-genetically modified organism)
- Organic and chemical free
- Wild birds have an easier time digesting and extracting the meal from NutraSaff seeds. In fact, J.J. Cardinal Naturalists, and customers who offer NutraSaff have even spotted eastern bluebirds, which are not known to be seedeaters, consuming, make that, devouring NutraSaff!)
- NutraSaff provides higher energy sources with less waste than any other birdseed product.

If you are using NutraSaff in your bird feeder for the first time, be patient: the birds may be attracted to it immediately or it may take up to a week, but once they do you will enjoy attracting the birds you want while eliminating grackles, starlings, and squirrels.

If you are replacing a product in your bird feeders with NutraSaff, you may experience squirrels and Grackles digging through it, looking for the birdseed they had previously enjoyed. It will not take long before they abandon their attempts and leave the safflower alone.

Juvenile grackles, red-winged blackbirds, and European starlings may be attracted to the NutraSaff prior to their migrating south for the winter; however, when they return the following year as adults, they will have little to do with it.
